

Antigen Tests for residents

In a bid to curb the increasing number of positive covid cases, the Luxembourg government launched a new campaign inviting Luxembourg residents to take part in a self-test.

Earlier this week households may have received a letter which could be exchanged for antigen covid tests across one the 98 pharmacies in Luxembourg free of charge. Participants of the tests will receive their box of test from the pharmacy and will be requested to test twice over four day intervals.

The objective of the campaign is to identify a positive case sooner rather than later before the case is spread to more people. As the festive season begins and with a fear of possible restrictions being introduced, these tests by individuals can have a large impact on controlling the number of infections.
